GEORGE B. McCLELLAN, THE BOY MAYOR.

George Brinton McClellan, not yet twenty-eight years of age, colonel by appointment on Gov. Bill's staff, only son of the great war general of the same name, formerly a newspaper reporter, later Treasurer of the Brooklyn Bridge, and now President of the New York Board of Aldermen, is, by right of his office, the present acting Mayor of New York. Col. McClellan is perhaps the youngest man that ever sat in the Mayor's chair, either as Mayor or acting Mayor, and he looks even younger than he is. As he sat at the Mayor's broad, carved oak table yesterday, smooth faced, blue eyed, with clustering brown hair, he looked almost boyish. He was dressed in a loose blue suit without a waistcoat, his collar was a "turn down," his small bow tie a light blue check, in his shirt bosom were three small moonstone studs, and he wore a brown leather belt and russet shoes. The face was square, full of character, expressive and showing dimples in the cheeks when he laughed, which he frequently did. He wore a seal ring on the little finger of his left hand and two rings, a diamond and a sapphire, on the little finger of his right, and toyed with an ivory-headed letter-opener making figures and punching holes in the light blue blotting pad on the desk before him as he talked. Altogether he had the appearance of a well-groomed young man, the clean, wholesome look of a man who takes a cold bath every morning.

Addressed as "Mr. Mayor," he bowed and asked gravely what he could do for his caller.

"Name? Oh, yes. Well, let me see. To begin with, I returned the Mayor's call yesterday. I believe that was the proper thing to

It Isn't Enough

that we should sell a very good business suit for $18.00, $16.50 and $15. You know money is a scarce commodity just now, and we have therefore reduced these suits to $12.50.

Different patterns and sizes, but all the same in quality.
